

Policies and Infrastructures for Physical Activity and Sport Good Practice in Europe

International Conference | November 8th - 9th, 2010 | Frankfurt / Main

Call for abstracts

Physical activity and sport require adequate environments!

Indoor and outdoor sports facilities, as well as infrastructures for self-organized physical activity such as parks, lanes or open landscape are major resources for physical activity and sport all over Europe.

Prof. Abby King, Stanford University, and Prof. Neville Owen, School of Population Health, The University of Queensland in Brisbane, Australia will be keynote speaker at the conference POIN 2010 "Policies and Infrastructures for Physical Activity and Sports: Good Practice in Europe". The conference will present new EU-guidelines on improving infrastructures for physical activity and sport. These guidelines were developed in the EU-project IMPALA. Examples of good practice will be put up for discussion at the event from European as well as from non-European countries. The conference will offer opportunities for exchange of experience and information to policy makers and key stakeholders in fields such as sport, health, urban and spatial planning.

Topics for submission

POIN 2010 welcomes abstracts that demonstrate good practice and innovative approaches in improving infrastructures for leisure-time physical activity in the local arena. Submissions can deal with overall policies and strategies that provide good practice or concrete mechanisms and instruments for improving these infrastructures. In particular, abstracts to be handed in should present examples of good practice and innovative approaches in a) planning, b) building, c) financing or d) managing of sport facilities or leisure-time infrastructures with specific opportunities for physical activity or urban and natural space that can be used for leisure-time physical activity. Submissions should contribute to enlarge the base for defining good practice criteria for improving infrastructures for leisure-time physical activity in the local arena.

Who should submit abstracts?

Representatives of public administration, policymakers, researchers, experts of sport associations, and other institutions and groups involved in decision-making about infrastructures for leisure-time physical activity can submit abstracts for oral or poster presentations that address the POIN 2010 themes and objectives.
